When a patient tests positive for COVID-19 and can remain in their home they should isolate with their household members in quarantine. As best they are able, the COVID-19 patient should isolate from other members of the household. The household should remain in quarantine until 7 days after the COVID-19 patient's positive specimen was collected or 72 hours after resolution of acute symptoms, whichever is longer. If no household member has developed symptoms of COVID-19 the household can be released from quarantine when the COVID-19 patient is released from isolation.

What's the deal with the cost of testing? The Governor's Executive Order on March 11th is aimed at protecting Arizonans and populations at high-risk of serious complications from this virus. The order requires insurance companies and health plans to cover out-of-network providers, including out-of-plan laboratories and telemedicine providers; Waives all copays, coinsurance, and deductibles for consumers related to COVID-19 diagnostic testing and decreases co-pays for telemedicine visits; implements consumer protections, including prohibiting price-gouging on COVID-19 of diagnosis and treatment-related services. Federally, the Families First Coronavirus Response Act requires private health insurance to cover testing to cover COVID-19 without imposing cost-sharing. This coverage includes the cost of administering such approved tests and related visits to health care providers.

Governor's COVID-19 Town Hall Meeting Tonight 6–7 p.m. The town hall will be live-streamed via YouTube, and on all AZ media outlets. The conversation will offer the latest information regarding the coronavirus pandemic. Members of the public can submit "virtual questions" here.
