Dr. Fauci Predicts Decline of COVID-19 Cases but Warns Against Complacency

There's been talk of a possible plateau in disease over the next week or two in the U.S. The real challenge will be for the public and locales to not become overly confident and allow rampant community transmission to continue.

At the end of last week, the CDC recommended that individuals who do make necessary trips out of their home wear a nonmedical cloth mask to reduce asymptomatic spread of the virus. The length of time for the CDC to make the call was driven by the fact that healthcare workers who are putting their lives on the line every day, saying they don't have enough personal protective equipment, including masks. Although homemade masks are not perfect, Fauci said, "If you do not know you are infected, wearing a mask will go a long way to prevent you from infecting someone else."

"Stay Home. Stay Healthy. Stay Connected."

- Stay Home: increase physical distancing, stop the spread of COVID-19 and protect yourself and your family. Stay home unless you are leaving for an essential service.
- Stay Healthy: remain physically active, wash your hands, use a tissue when you sneeze, and maintain healthy habits.
- Stay Connected: find alternative ways to stay connected to family and friends by using technology. We'll get through this together.
