When a vaccine for COVID-19 becomes available, its distribution in Arizona could look a lot like how the state handled "swine flu" immunizations in 2009, according to health officials. YCCHS recruited hundreds of volunteers through the Medical Reserve Corps. Testing sites were arranged in key locations in the county for H1N1 - both medical and non-medical for administering vaccine, filling out necessary paperwork, to traffic control inside and outside the locations.

The Yavapai County Medical Reserve Corps was formed in 2003 to establish a team of active and retired medical professionals, non-medical laypersons, and public health professionals to help during medical or public health threats or emergencies that overwhelm current hospital resources.

Since the events of 9/11, the MRC has played an important role in our county preparedness and response strategy. MRC volunteers may be called to participate in responses for mass vaccination or antibiotic dispensing, mass medical care, disease control, or providing for the health needs of vulnerable populations, including sheltering.

If you have questions and would like more information about the MRC program, please contact us at (928) 442-5487 or email web.phep@yavapai.us.
